Outline of the call

Why did we launch this knowledge-to-action call?

- Local people have the knowledge, experience and capacity to develop and implement their own effective resilience solutions.
- There is an urgent need to put local and marginalised people at the centre of climate-resilient action, so that individuals and communities can shape their own responses to the climate challenge.
- This call aims to support locally-led climate-resilient action across the themes of gender equity and social inclusion, finance for resilience, ecosystem-based approaches, enhancing climate literacy and empowering young people in Africa.

What are we looking for?

- Projects should support locally-led climate-resilient action and be locally-led.
- Be aligned with the themes of gender equity and social inclusion, finance for resilience, ecosystem-based approaches, enhancing climate literacy and empowering young people.
- Must integrate gender equity and social inclusion.
- Lead organisations must be based in Africa. Further preference will be given to African organisations.
- At least one organisation must have an established presence in the locality in which the project is based.
